Overview

Tuakiri enables students, academics, alumni and researchers to get secure and seamless access to their computing resources and collaboration environments using one set of credentials granted by their home organisation. The home organisation provides the user with identity credentials and an authorisation process administered by the resource owner or administrator grants the user permission to the resource.

General Information

Tuakiri access federation services realise tangible benefits for research communities, research institutes and the higher education sector through ease of use, reduced complexity and costs. The federation's policies and rules enable trust relationships between research institutes and universities across New Zealand.

JISC have provided a toolkit full of useful information on identity management. (Please read the disclaimer for the toolkit before acting on its advice or copying its content.)

Typically you will be an institution and/or a service provider to the higher education and research sectors with a desire to conceive and develop new methodologies and technologies. Your institution will join other institutions in New Zealand and globally as a trendsetter in the higher education and research sectors, driving innovation and knowledge sharing.

The institutions are required to follow and abide by:

1. Tuakiri Federation Rules
2. Tuakiri Test and Production Federation Terms of Use, and
3. Tuakiri Test and Production Federation Usage Policy
